While FRAPs are just a normal release of energy, they can be a problem if the house is small and the dog is large. If you know a certain time of day (early evening is common) when your dog is likely to zoom, set him up to do it outside. (If you can cue him into a zoomie with play bow, you're all set.)Even better, help your pet release that energy with a game of fetch or something else that ...
