The Man Who Understood Cats

The Manx cat (/ ' m æ ŋ k s /, in earlier times often spelled Manks) is a breed of domestic cat (Felis catus) originating on the Isle of Man, with a naturally occurring mutation that shortens the tail. Many Manx have a small stub of a tail, but Manx cats are best known as being entirely tailless; this is the most distinguishing characteristic of the breed, along with elongated hind legs and ...

The cat (Felis catus) is a small carnivorous mammal. It is the only domesticated species in the family Felidae and often referred to as the domestic cat to distinguish it from wild members of the family. The cat is either a house cat, kept as a pet, or a feral cat, freely ranging and avoiding human contact. A house cat is valued by humans for companionship and for its ability to hunt rodents.

Richmond shares that message with the hundreds of people each year who attend Neighborhood Cats' TNR workshops. "People think when you're going to fix a colony that the first step you do is go get your traps and set them out and get them to the clinic, but that's actually toward the end of the process," she says.

Cat, (Felis catus), also called house cat or domestic cat, domesticated member of the family Felidae, order Carnivora, and the smallest member of that family. Like all felids, domestic cats are characterized by supple low-slung bodies, finely molded heads, long tails that aid in balance, and specialized teeth and claws that adapt them admirably to a life of active hunting.

Raccoons are about the same size as a domestic cat, though they are generally somewhat larger. Male raccoons, especially ones who are tame male, will voluntarily mate with cats. But mating between wild raccoons and cats also occurs. Cats have also been known to nurse baby raccoons (see nursing video below).

Long time readers may recall an article we did in 2016 called In Praise of Black Cats – in that post, one purrticular disturbing statistic is the fact that black cats (especially seniors) are the least popular cats to be adopted from shelters. Interestingly enough, the second least popular cats to be adopted are orange tabbies.

The Bloody Chamber is a collection of short stories by legendary British writer Angela Carter, whose untimely death in 1992 brought her work extensive critical attention. It was first published in 1979, at which time it won the Cheltenham Festival of Literature prize. Many consider The Bloody Chamber to be a feminist reworking of the patriarchal fairy tale form, yet Carter expressly said otherwise.

A friend of mine is adopting 2 shelter cats because of this cartoon, so I think you're doing OK here, Georgia. My husband and I want to adopt one or two more, but our eldest (17) is in renal failure – doing OK for now – but we know the level of care and cost ahead of us, and we're concerned adding another cat might put him under too much stress and hasten his decline.
