The author explains that most of our knowledge and familiarity with history and ancient civilizations is centered around the "elite"; the kings, queens, rulers, aristocrats, and the wealthy. He attempted to give us a bit of background into the "other side" of that history, or in other words, what daily life was like for the common folk.

People share generally accepted opinions on every famous historical event. But there is a chance that some of these points of view were imposed on us by the powers that be, possibly for their own profit. Bright Side searched for alternative theories to famous historical events and looked at them from another viewpoint. Alternative does not always mean true, and they are not officially recognized.

Doubting the identity or the veracity of its history is an offense to the very core of their being, and to do so makes you ableist, misogynistic, homophobic, xenophobic, Islamophobic, racist. Each group has its own cultural norms. These norms must be respected by other groups, because it is taken on faith that all cultures are equal.

The Other Side of History

The author focuses on what he calls the 'other side' of history, looking at the way ordinary people, rather than the ruling classes, lived their lives. He paints vivid pictures of the daily challenges facing early humans, Neanderthals, hunter-gatherers, the first farmers, the first citizens of Mesopotamia, the Egyptians, Greeks and Romans.
