Golding was at one time a teacher at Bishop Wordsworth's School in Salisbury, where his study window looked out upon the spire of Salisbury Cathedral. The spire, William Golding : notes by Steve Eddy

To admire that spire is to admire a work of madness and evil. And so, perhaps to admire any such art is to admire a dark, selfish and wild part of the human psyche. Perhaps, in fact, that is the ultimate message. That great art involves sacrifice, cruelty, inhumanity.
