Is the intellectual principle united to the body as its form? Is the intellectual principle multiplied numerically according to the number of bodies or is there one intelligence for all men? In the body, the form of which is an intellectual principle, is there some other soul? In the body is there any other substantial form? What are the qualities required in the body of which the intellectual ...

Does the soul know bodies through the intellect? Does it understand them through its essence, or through any species? If through some species, are the species of all things intelligible naturally innate in the soul? Are these species derived by the soul from certain separate immaterial forms? Does our soul see in the eternal ideas all that it understands?

Berlin. October 7, 1944. A typical day toward the end of the Third Reich. Soldiers die. Civilians suffer. Jews are murdered. Nothing special. In the Beethovensaal a concert is about to begin, but the theater is empty, relieved of its usual audience studded with Nazi elite seeking a brief cultured respite from the stresses of war. The Berlin Philharmonic Orchestra is on stage, awaiting its cue.

While the spirit of the Renaissance ultimately took many forms, it was expressed earliest by the intellectual movement called humanism. Humanism was initiated by secular men of letters rather than by the scholar-clerics who had dominated medieval intellectual life and had developed the Scholastic philosophy. Humanism began and achieved fruition first in Italy.
