In June 1986, a South-African woman was burned to death on television. Her name was Maki Skosana, and the world watched in horror as anti-apartheid activists wrapped her up in a car tire, doused her with gasoline, and set her on fire. For most of the world, her screams of agony were their first experience with the public execution South Africans called "necklacing."

My mother instilled in me a love of reading, so when I discovered several of Sabatini's titles in a bookstore, I bought Captain Blood. Many years later, I did some pirate research that took me back to this novel. As I reread Captain Blood in preparation for writing this article, I realized how much I hadn't understood the first time.
