Hotpants, hot pants, or booty shorts describe extremely short shorts, which may be worn by women or to a lesser extent, by men. The term was first used by Women's Wear Daily in 1970 to describe shorts made in luxury fabrics such as velvet and satin for fashionable wear, rather than their more practical equivalents that had been worn for sports or leisure since the 1930s.

Awesome post, Andrew! I think all the points you raised are true — but not for everyone. It takes a certain amount of exposure to the flip chart to use it properly — presenters need to have legible handwriting, not cover the flip chart as they write, and also keep some ready flip charts for non-candid scenarios.

I once read something about how ghost stories in the USA became more ubiquitous with the civil war. How it was the first war on our soil that a body could just never be recovered, that the death toll was comparatively massive for our population at the time, and that the war's subject (slavery) made the cumulative dead of black slaves into ghosts as their basic personhood became more 'real' ...
