Hello everyone – The Alexander Shulgin Research Institute has some exciting news that we'd like to share with you. Transform Press, which was founded in 1991 by Alexander ("Sasha") and Ann Shulgin to publish their now cult classic PiHKAL, has officially become a separate sister organization.. As part of this move, Transform Press has launched its own website.

Un hallucinogène est une substance chimique psychotrope qui induit des hallucinations, soit, aux doses usuelles, des altérations des perceptions, de la cohérence de la pensée et de la régularité de l'humeur, mais sans causer de confusion mentale persistante ou de troubles de la mémoire [1]. Cet état, appelé état modifié de conscience par certains usagers, peut être atteint par une ...

Hallucinogène — Wikipédia

Hallucinogène est une substance capable de modifier la perception, l'humeur, la conscience et le comportement. Elle agit sur le système nerveux central en interférant avec la transmission des messages entre les neurones. Les hallucinogènes sont classés en deux grandes catégories : les hallucinogènes sérotoninergiques (comme le LSD, le psilocybin, le mescaline) et les hallucinogènes dopaminergiques (comme la cocaïne, l'amphétamine). Les hallucinogènes sérotoninergiques agissent sur les récepteurs 5-HT2A du système sérotoninergique, tandis que les hallucinogènes dopaminergiques agissent sur les récepteurs D2 du système dopaminergique. Les hallucinogènes sérotoninergiques provoquent des hallucinations visuelles et auditives, ainsi que des modifications de l'humeur et du comportement. Les hallucinogènes dopaminergiques provoquent des hallucinations auditives et des modifications de l'humeur et du comportement. Les hallucinogènes sont utilisés à des fins thérapeutiques, notamment pour traiter la dépression, l'anxiété et les troubles de la personnalité. Ils sont également utilisés à des fins récréatives, notamment pour provoquer des hallucinations et des modifications de l'humeur et du comportement. Les hallucinogènes sont considérés comme des substances dangereuses car ils peuvent provoquer des effets secondaires graves, notamment des hallucinations, des modifications de l'humeur et du comportement, et des troubles de la personnalité. Ils sont également considérés comme des substances addictives car ils peuvent provoquer une dépendance. Les hallucinogènes sont donc des substances dangereuses et addictives qui doivent être utilisées avec précaution.
