From this tradition comes The Fox Woman, a historic fantasy of a fox who falls in love with a nobleman. Kij Johnson puts in plenty of detail, both of feudal era Japan and the lives of foxes--details that provide a generous reality on which the unreality nexus of the two can be explored.

The Fox Woman (Love/War/Death, #1) by Kij Johnson

The Fox Woman by Kij Johnson. This is the gift of humanity: that it is claimed by the self. None of us—Shikujo or Yoshifuji or my grandfather or myself or my brother or my woman, Josei—are human unless and until we claim it for ourselves. But nothing can stop that claiming—not the eight million gods nor the spirits nor ghosts. Nothing but ourselves, anyway.

The Fox Woman Summary - eNotes.com

“The Fox Woman” has all three of these problems: two of the main characters aren’t quite interesting enough to pull off the diary-as-narrative trick, and so when the plot bogs down in the beginning of the novel — the first 100 pages or so happen before the story really gets started — the going can be a little tough.
