The Curate's Awakening by George MacDonald. My rating: 4 of 5 stars (Click the title to find the book description/blurb.) Thomas Wingfold, the curate of Glaston, entered the ministry as a profession, having seen no reason not to do so.

The Curate's Awakening by George MacDonald - Prismatic ...

Here, in The Curate of Glaston, its title is The Lady's Confession, and I fail to find any anti-vivisectionist propaganda, so this last must have ended up on the editor's metaphorical cutting floor. And I surely don't miss it. There is profound human interest in The Lady's Confession without the extra stuff.

The Curate's Awakening - George MacDonald - Google Books

George MacDonald is a very engaging read; admittedly, I didn't really get into the book until the third chapter, but after that, I read through every minute of my spare time. The first section of the book, The Curate's Awakening, was my favorite of the three; the character of Polwarth has a way of affirming some of my beliefs with irrefutable ...

CHAPTER V. GLASTON AND THE CURATE. Outside, the sun rose and set, never a crimson thread the less in the garment of his glory that the spirit of one of the children of the earth was stained with blood-guiltiness; the moon came up and knew nothing of the matter; the stars minded their own business; and the people of Glaston were talking about their curate's sermons. Alas, it was about his ...
