Affect is a concept used in psychology to describe the experience of feeling or emotion. The term "affect" takes on a different meaning in other fields. In psychology, affect mediates an organism's interaction with stimuli. The word also refers sometimes to affect display, which is "a facial, vocal, or gestural behavior that serves as an indicator of affect" (APA 2006).

The world grows ever more interdependent, yet the world's governance structures remain insularly national. This asymmetry between nationally determined governance decisions and their transnational impact, without the affected peoples having a say on the decisions shaping their lives, is a problem that democracy has to confront, in the era of globalisation.
