“Act” is the result of Denis Darzacq’s long work amongst people with learning disabilities. Even though some of the subjects are actors, athletes and dancers, each of them found in the acting and in the ownership of the public space a means to express the complexity of their individuality beyond the assigned label of “handicapped person”.

By Victoria Bukofske. Ayris: As a writer and an essayist, what is your favorite part of the writing process and why? Monica Bilson: When I write something that involves a lot of research, I enjoy writing the first draft and fitting all the puzzle pieces together. It’s always a fun challenge to put research-based work into a narrative with voice, so it’s not dry and academic.

American Book Review :: 100 Best Last Lines from Novels

In a 2013 interview with Joe Fassler, horror fiction maestro Stephen King reflected on the magnitude of a novel’s introductory sentence. “An opening line should invite the reader to begin the story,” he said. "It should say: Listen. Come in here. You want to know about this." The first sentence sets the stage—however long or short the text—and hints at the "narrative vehicle ...
