The second documentary film, Zeitgeist: Addendum, attempts to locate the root causes of this pervasive social corruption, while offering a solution. This solution is not based not on politics, morality, laws, or any other establishment notions of human affairs, but rather on a modern, non-superstitious based understanding of what we are and how we align with nature, to which we are a part.

I've been reading Martin Kitchen's book 'fascism', who has an interesting theory about the rise of fascism. The theory is incredibly complex and those that love dense theory should probably read it themselves, but I've put together a little adaptation of my own (that Kitchen would probably criticize on many points):

Introduction 1. From Athens to Rome. The imperium Romanum. . . this most admirable work of art in the grand style was a beginning; its construction was designed to prove itself through thousands of years: until today nobody has built again like this, nobody has dreamed of building in such proportions sub specie aeterni. This organization was firm enough to withstand bad emperors: the accident ...

Most supervisors would find #2 and #3 to be problematic and requiring additional steps. In #2, immediate attention should be given to the possibility that this client should be transferred to another therapist, as a cardinal rule of every profession is "do no harm" and the highest duty of the supervisor is to protect the client.
