My mummy cat hates her sons. Only one is still alive, but she's hated them since the day they got snipped. I think she wasn't used to her kittens sticking around (she had a rough life before she came to us) so when they were out for the day, she kind of got on with things, and seemed very unhappy when they came back in the evening.

I first heard the scream of a fisher cat several years ago. Having grown up here and spending much of my youth hunting and calling animals, I knew what I heard was not a fox or a raccoon. If I had to describe what it sounded like, I would say it is a cross between a woman being attacked and a bad power steering pump chattering sound.
