Transparent (Transparent #1)(13) Natalie Whipple. Seth sits under a tree in the courtyard, and I take a spot in the shade, plenty of distance between us. He looks at my worksheets again, then directly at my frames. It freaks me out, how he doesn't search for my limbs or squint like that might help him see. He just picks a spot and stares.

Transparent by Natalie Whipple is an intriguing debut that is gorgeously written. From the first line of "I nearly died the second I was born," I was hooked, and I didn't want to put it down the entire way. The plot of Transparent was bizarre - bizarre and weird and I loved it. It was so uniquely refreshing from what else is out in the world of YA.
