Ralph Waldo Emerson wrote: "The only person you are destined to become is the person you decide to be." His words speak to the power of one's potential which awaits release in the moment of our decision. Our potential is not something of our past, but a gift awaiting realization at every moment of life.

What is my purpose in life? What do I want out of life? What past success and achievements have I had? What am I good at? What am I not good at? What gives me joy? What are my current life circumstances? Who is someone I admire, and what characteristics does he or she have? Do I have those circumstances?

Well tomorrow is my birthday. For many people their birthday is a cause for celebration – a day to feel special. I don't know if it is because I went through a large part of teens and 20s without parties, and my 21 st birthday was so momentous that no one even said happy birthday (this was pre-facebook) and I ate Subway alone – true story. . However, despite the fact that I was a bit of ...

Walking a path of service. Although the conceptual framework that guides the work of the Ruhi Institute addresses the spiritual growth of the individual, it is recognized that an individual's spiritual condition and his or her progress are matters that only God can judge and that human beings should not presume to measure.

To understand how I approached China during my time as Secretary, it's important to note that I don't see U.S. strategy in Asia as centered on China at all. I said many times: We don't have a China policy, we have an Asia policy. The heart of that policy is a mesh of political, diplomatic, economic, and military relationships with many nations that has sustained security and underwritten ...
