First edition cover. The Untouchable is a 1997 novel by the Irish writer John Banville. The book is written as a roman à clef, presented from the point of view of the art historian, double agent and homosexual Victor Maskell—a character based largely on Cambridge spy Anthony Blunt and in part on Irish poet Louis MacNeice.

The Untouchable (novel) - Wikipedia

Beneath the Veneer: John Banville's The Untouchable. The Untouchable is a serious novel about a spy, unconstrained by the genre of "spy novel." Le Carré sees a "voluptuous" quality in the spying life. Banville does as well: "The aphrodisiac qualities of secrecy and fear" are an integral part of the novel's chemistry.

The Untouchable by John Banville - Penguin Random House

An icy, detailed portrait of a traitor, and a precise meditation on the nature of belief and betrayal. Banville (Athena, 1995, etc.) tends to allow the shimmering intensity of his prose to overcome plot and character. This time out, though, he keeps matters moving along briskly and his prose, while still vigorous, firmly under control. Sir Victor Maskell, an elderly, much-honored art historian ...

THE UNTOUCHABLE by John Banville - Webster University

That's strike two, Mr. Banville, and two is all most authors get from me. Banville is a serious Literary Dude, and this is a serious Literary Dude's novel. The Untouchable is written as a memoir by one Victor Maskell, who is based on real-life Cambridge spy Anthony Blunt; although this is a novel, it's only loosely fictionalized history.
