Hi Johan, I was confused like you but I think that I have may have an explanation of sorts. It is based on the fact that the max thrust rating for an engine is calculated at a given temperature, say 30 degrees C.

Can you explain the assumed temperature take off?

When I'm cage trapping I find a trail then the spot where a cage will go in good and not be right on the trail, I like to put the cage where the target can see it from an angle and a couple feet off the trail, a cat toilet, is in my opinion the best place to put the cage about 10-30 feet away from the toilet.
