I remember that getting lost in the words of a book was my favorite pastime. Nothing felt as good as picking up a great book, losing myself in it, and letting the hours pass by. I also liked playing my GameCube and old video games as well, but, in the end, it was reading that I would pretty much always resort to.

Not that long ago, before GPS or smartphones with map apps, there was the simple paper road map. Either as a single sheet, a larger, folded sheet of paper or bound as a collection of maps into a road atlas, the paper road map was a staple in our cars. But it seems these days, reading a roadmap has become a lost art.

Review: Arthur M. Melzer's 'Philosophy Between the Lines'. The loss of esoteric reading has done a great deal of damage to modern education. Reviving the art of esoteric reading is necessary not only because it allows for a more accurate appreciation of older philosophic texts but also, Melzer says, because the shallow and dismissive "exoteric"...
