ABSTRACT:. During the pre-Salk era, paralytic poliomyelitis was one of the most feared diseases of twentieth-century North America. This perception, held most strongly by the middle class -- polio's principal target -- shaped a unique Canadian response to it based on comprehensive, standardized and unconditional programs of "state medicine" at the provincial level.

It took 200,000 years of human history to get to one billion people - and just 200 years to reach seven billion. That's partly how the exponential "hockey stick" growth curve works, but it is also a factor of improvements in living standards, sanitation, and medicine that came after the Industrial Revolution.
