Why Purpose-Driven Companies Are Often More Successful

The particular problem at work is that multiplication is pretty easy to do, but reversing the multiplication — in the form of factoring — is apparently pretty hard. Multiplying given numbers p and q together to calculate $p \times q = n$ is pretty straightforward; even elementary school children are taught to do it quickly and accurately by long multiplication.

Step Aerobics – I'm personally not the biggest fan of step aerobics but if you're a Jane Fonda fan then feel free to add step aerobics into your at home workout.. Running – I know you can't run at home! Well you can, but that'd be odd. But it doesn't require a gym and all you need are a pair of shoes two feet and the road ahead.
