The vast majority of Burundi's population is Hutu, traditionally a farming people. Power, however, has long rested with the Tutsi minority, which historically has controlled the army and most of the economy, particularly the lucrative international export of coffee. Few real cultural differences are distinguishable between the two peoples, and both speak Rundi (Kirundi).

During the last Ice Age, a thick layer of ice covered much of Sweden. By 6,000 BC, when that ice finally retreated (or melted) across the southern areas, it left in its wake a jagged coastline with many islands, and innumerable lakes, rivers and streams. Subsequently, the exposed lands turned green and fertile, wildlife returned, and it is thought that the first settlers arrived here from ...
